Description: An Unquenchable Thirst is the autobiography of Mary Johnson, a woman in search of God, love, and her true-self under the influence of Mother Theresa's teachings. Review: I have to admit, I wasn't expecting this book to affect me so much, but Mary's story was really moving and genuine. The level of detail was astonishing, Mary's feelings and surroundings adding to an already intense journey for human understanding; her hopes, fears, and secrets permeating every page.

On Writing a Memoir. When I was writing An Unquenchable Thirst, these were the things I told myself: Go deep. Be honest. Don ' t flinch at the embarrassing parts. Trust your readers. Don ' t over-explain. Simple words will allow readers to enter your experience more directly. Don ' t let your fear of putting the words on the page overcome you.

~~About the Book — Mary Johnson~~

This extremely well-written memoir is a not only a compelling story; it is a good read. Even though everything has already happened, the author has written in such a gripping way that you just have to read the next chapter, and the next, and the next.
